Message from the CEO

Welcome aboard

Welcome aboard, and may I wish you a happy and prosperous 2023 from all of us at Air Niugini.

The airline's international and domestic services have largely returned to pre-COVID-19 levels, and we are carrying more passengers than before the pandemic.

We are planning major investments in our fleet this year and next, as we look to replace some of our aircraft with more modern, comfortable and fuel-efficient replacements.

With international services back, we are also re-establishing our codeshare and interline relationships with international airlines such as Qatar Airways, Cathay Pacific, Air France, Emirates and Qantas to ensure it is even easier for you to travel the world on an Air Niugini ticket.

This also involves re-establishing our network of international lounges. Our Executive Club members and business class customers can now enjoy Air New Zealand's lounges in Brisbane and Sydney, with premium lounge access also available in Singapore, Manila and Hong Kong.

Domestically, we have opened new lounges in Goroka and Wewak and look forward to soon adding Kavieng to our existing lounge network.

Travellers will also be able to enjoy brand-new terminal facilities at some of Papua New Guinea's key domestic airports this year. November 2022 saw the opening of Kavieng's modern new terminal, while Lae's state-of-the-art terminal is scheduled to open in mid-2023.

We have every expectation that demand will grow again this year, and your national airline is gearing up for the challenge.

Finally, I want to draw your attention to a recent agreement reached between Air Niugini and PNG's Tourism Promotion Authority. The aim of this agreement is to support our tourism industry as it bounces back from the COVID pandemic by encouraging more people to explore this beautiful country and enjoy its many marvellous resorts.

Under the arrangement, Air Niugini Tours is offering some fantastic flight-and-accommodation packages at deeply discounted prices to some of PNG's most memorable locations, both for domestic tourist travel and for those flying into PNG for tourism.

I encourage you take advantage of these excellent deals as we roll them out.

I take this opportunity to thank you for your loyal support of PNG's national airline as we have returned during 2022 to the opportunity to travel, and wish you and your families a safe and blessed Christmas period.

Ribbon cut for opening of 'new' Kavieng Airport

Air Niugini's first Boeing 737 aircraft landed at Kavieng Airport on November 3, following a PGK125.72 million upgrade to the runway and a new terminal building.

The airport development has included a 500-metre runway extension to achieve a total length of 2200 metres to take bigger planes, the upgrading of existing runway, taxiway and apron pavement, and a new ground lighting system.

The new terminal includes a spacious departure lounge with a shop and ATM facilities, baggage screening machines, conveyor belts for baggage, state-of-art check-in counters, back-up generators, and two VIP lounges.

The new-look airport was opened by the Prime Minister, James Marape, witnessed by local MPs, dignitaries, CEOs of state-owned enterprises and the people of New Ireland.

The new facility is part of a program by the National Airports Corporation to upgrade all 22 national airports and is funded by passengers can enjoy brand-new airport facilities, as well as a fast and smooth ride to the destination on a B737 aircraft. ■

Air Niugini running like clockwork

Air Niugini is continuing to achieve high targets with its on-time efficiency, outperforming many airlines in Australia and the Pacific.

Air Niugini's domestic departures were on time 81 per cent of the time during a three-month period late in 2022.

On-time flights are those that leave within 15 minutes of the scheduled departure time.

For the same period in 2022, the Qantas group was on time with 65 per cent of flights, and Virgin Australia with 66.7 per cent.

Air Niugini operated more than 5500 flights during the survey period, with more than 90 per cent flying on domestic routes.

The cancellation rate for Air Niugini for the 12 months to August in 2022 was under 3 per cent, compared to the Qantas group that cancelled 9.7 per cent of services, Jetstar 11.9 per cent and Virgin Australia 8.2 per cent.

Air Niugini's Chief Executive Officer, Bruce Alabaster, says: "To be able to continuously achieve such a result in an environment like this against other larger regional airlines is not easy. I commend all staff for a job very well done."

The CEO confirmed that the strong performance has allowed the airline to return to profitability after a tough two years due to COVID-19.

This has allowed new sales offices in Gerehu and 8 Mile in Port Moresby, and new lounges at Kavieng and Goroka airports. There are plans to also open more sales offices and lounges, with announcements coming soon. ■

A LIFETIME OF SERVICE

Meet Air Niugini's longest serving employee, Alcan Mattiunga, an aircraft maintenance engineer who has been with the airline for 45 years.

Mattiunga has seen Air Niugini grow from a small domestic carrier into the international airline it is today with flights to Australia, Asia and the Pacific.

He was only 18 when he joined Air Niugini in 1978 as an apprentice. He is now 62 and admits the option for retirement may not be far off.

"I wouldn't have made it here without my family's support and of course Air Niugini, a great company to work for," he says. "Air Niugini has given me everything, for which I am forever grateful."

Mattiunga is a product of late Grand Chief Sir Michael Somare's vision in 1975 for Papua New Guineans to be professionals in their own country in fields such as engineering, medicine, law and accounting.

He says he was glad to be part of that vision and to make it a reality.

"PNG was a new sovereign nation, and as a young Papua New Guinean coming out of colonial rule it wasn't easy to work in a professional field. But some of us took the challenge head on," he says.

"As a Papua New Guinean working for the national airline at that time, I was very proud, and I am still today."

Mattiunga recalls that during the early days of his career engineers were guided in their work by the Aircraft Maintenance Manual (AMM), a bulky and heavy book that detailed the way maintenance tasks on a specific aircraft must be carried out.

"The AMM contained information required to service, repair, replace, adjust, inspect and check equipment and systems on the aircraft," he says. "We used to fly with the manual

Mattiunga has acquired several aircraft maintenance licences during his career, including licences to work on F28, F100, F70 and B737 aircraft.

As a licensed aircraft maintenance engineer (LAME), his responsibility is to certify that aircraft systems such as

"While successfully acquiring aircraft maintenance licenses has been my biggest achievement, the thing that satisfies me most is training and mentoring young Papua New Guineans to also pick up their licenses," he says.

He has some words of advice for young Papua New Guineans considering the same career path that he has taken.

"Becoming an aircraft engineer is not easy, it's a demanding job that requires great responsibility, but always remember that nothing is too hard when you set your mind to it.

"Set your priorities right, ensure honesty, reliability, commitment, discipline and show respect to your co-workers. Finally, always be guided by rules and regulations that are in place." ■

AIRLINE BOARD ON THE MOVE AROUND COUNTRY

Since taking up the role of chairman at Air Niugini five years ago, Sir Kostas Constantinou has made it a point to take board meetings to the provinces.

This is so board members can see and talk to staff about work issues and be updated on the progress of infrastructure work at regional airports.

One of the meetings late in 2022 was in Wewak. As seen in the main picture, the chairman and directors were warmly welcomed by a sing-sing group on arrival at Boram Airport.

Apart from catching up with staff, there are opportunities through the roving board meetings for corporate functions where board members can meet with Air Niugini's key business partners.

The board and management have been able to update customers across the country on Air Niugini's recent performance, how it survived during the height of the COVID-19 pandemic, and its plans for the future. ■

Air Niugini staff show spirit of independence

To commemorate Papua New Guinea's 47th Independence anniversary on September 16, Air Niugini staff dressed for work in PNG colours and traditional attire (pictured).

In the week leading up to September 16, staff marked Independence with several activities, including the sharing of traditional dishes during lunch time, raising the national flag, singing the national anthem, and reciting the national pledge.

Air Niugini has removed all COVID-19 restrictions associated with air travel. This includes the requirement to wear a mask in airports and on aircraft. It has also removed the requirement that passengers travelling into PNG from overseas must show evidence of having been vaccinated against COVID-19.

Passengers travelling from PNG to Australia do not have to show evidence of having been vaccinated against COVID-19, however some other international destination still have restrictions in place.

Qantas Club members travelling on Air Niugini international flights can now access the Air Niugini lounge in Port Moresby, and the Air New Zealand lounges in Brisbane and Sydney.

Fifteen Air Niugini staff have completed training on how to support victims of family and sexual violence within the workplace.

The two-day training was conducted by the Business Coalition for Women.

Air Niugini Chief Executive Officer, Bruce Alabaster, says such training is important as it ensures airline staff who may be faced with violence and suffering can get the help they require through a well-co-ordinated program of support.

Air Niugini's Destinations loyalty program destinations.com.pg has renewed partnerships for another 12 months with Kumul Consumer Goods and Axellerate Sports.

Both have a wide range of products to offer loyalty club members, who can either redeem points for goods or airline tickets. ■

PARADISE Q&A

SIMON SILAS

Behind the scenes at Air Niugini is a dedicated workforce. Here, we meet an aircraft engineer whose role is to inspect, maintain and repair the airline's Bombardier Q400 turboprop planes.

Q: What's a typical working day look like for you?

A: I am usually at work before 7.30am to meet with the foreman, who updates engineers and gives out tasks for the week. This is followed by another meeting with the lead hand, who dishes out daily jobs from troubleshooting to the removal of components that can range from a small part, or an engine, or even the landing gear. While experience is a plus, patience and perseverance are essential.

Q What type of aircraft do you work on?

A: I am a licensed aircraft maintenance engineer (LAME) on Q400 aircraft. I obtained my license in August 2022, after joining the airline as an engineer recruit in 2014.

Q: Why did you decide to become an aircraft engineer?

A: I was always interested in science growing up and when it came to aircraft, I have always been fascinated how a heavy piece of metal can lift off the ground with so much ease. I was also fascinated about how a human mind works and its capability and ability to ensure that the metal flies. That really pushed me to take up engineering.

Q: How did you become a licensed aircraft maintenance engineer?

A: I was in my fourth and final year of a Bachelor of Science, majoring in physics, at the University of Papua New Guinea when recruited by Air Niugini to join its engineering cadet program.

Q: What's something we don't know about aircraft engineering?

A: There are two streams of aircraft maintenance engineer: mechanics and avionics. The mechanical field is focused

I have always been fascinated how a heavy piece of metal can lift off the ground with so much ease.

on the structure of the aircraft and avionics concentrates on the electrical systems of an aircraft.

Q: What do you like most about the job?

A: The satisfaction you get after a long day's work on an aircraft inspecting, maintaining and repairing the various electrical/electronic, mechanical and structural components of the aircraft and eventually seeing it lift off the ground.

Q: What advice do you have for people wanting to get into this career?

A: To become an aircraft maintenance engineer requires a lot of commitment and sacrifices. It takes an even longer period to qualify as a licensed engineer, however with perseverance you can get there. Never shy away from tasks and challenges, take them as they come. If you are interested in something, go for it, if you are not sure about something, it's always good to ask.

Q: What personal skills do they need?

A: It helps if you are a technically minded person who is focused and result oriented. It is important to have strong analytical and problem-solving skills, computer skills and attention to detail. You must also have strong awareness of safety and must be good with your hands. ■

Kokoda, 80 years on

The 80th anniversary of the end of hostilities on the Kokoda Trail was commemorated on Fuzzy Wuzzy Angels Day on November 3 with a laying of wreaths and the re-opening of a community museum at the Kokoda Station in Oro Province.

The anniversary event was attended by officials from Papua New Guinea and Australia, as well as Wallace 'Soc' Kienzle, the son of Australian soldier Herbert Kienzle, who lived and fought on the trail 80 years earlier.

After the war, Soc and his dad Herbert collected military artefacts left behind. This collection became the basis of the Herbert Kienzle Memorial Museum, which has been refurbished with an investment by the Governor of Oro Province, Gary Juffa, and the Australian Minister for International Development and the Pacific, Pat Conroy, with Soc Kienzle (middle at back), at the museum re-opening; Captain Herbert Kienzle (above).

Australian Government to mark the 80th anniversary.

Fuzzy Wuzzy Angels Day (recently gazetted by PNG as November 3 each year) commemorates the enduring bond that was formed between the Papuan and New Guinean carriers and the Australian troops they supported during the Kokoda Campaign.

"I'm returning to pay homage to what my father and the Fuzzy Wuzzy Angels did."

What they achieved together can never be underestimated," Soc Kienzle said.

"Without the Papuans, victory at Kokoda would not have been possible."

By the end of fighting, both Australia and Japan had suffered thousands of casualties. The number of carriers who died remains unknown.

Prior to COVID-19, about 3500 trekkers, mostly from Australia, made the 96-kilometre pilgrimage along the Kokoda Trail annually. Tourism provides a source of income for local communities and honours the historic friendship between the two nations.

Through the Kokoda Initiative, PNG and Australia have committed to protecting the trail's military heritage, improving the lives of communities along the trail, and preserving its unique environment.

Guided by the Papua New Guinean National Museum and Art Gallery, the Australian Government has invested in the construction of three community museums along the trail and at Buna. The museums protect and display local artefacts, and double as community trade centres.

The Australian Government is also supporting the Kokoda Track Authority to sustainably manage the tourism industry and improve livelihoods of people in the region. ■

New ambulance centre for Port Moresby

St John Ambulance has officially opened a new emergency operations centre at its Taurama Road site in Port Moresby.

The centre provides St John with a much-improved ability to coordinate ambulance services, doubling the previous number of call-taker and dispatcher desks.

The centre has a capacity to support up to 120 ambulances and 10 flight medical teams at any one time around Papua New Guinea.

The Department of Prime Minister and National Executive Council invested PGK500,000 and Kumul Consolidated Holdings

PGK1 million towards the centre. Other business houses that assisted in the construction include Motorola, MJE and TEPNG.

Earlier in 2022, the Australian Government supported a significant upgrade of communications systems for St John, and the New Zealand Government and United Nations Development Program helped supply HF radios for rural ambulances.

At the opening of the centre, Prime Minister James Marape said: "St John Ambulance Service will be allocated increased budgetary support in 2023."

PICTURE: SUPPLIED BY ST JOHN AMBULANCE

More than 150 people serve St John in ambulance service-related roles in four regions of PNG, including Port Moresby, Kundiawa, Lae and Kokopo. The ambulance service responds to more than 15,000 emergencies annually. ■

The photographer, visiting from Poland, took this behind-the-scenes photograph at the Kenu and Kudu Festival in Alotau before COVID-19 shut down the world in 2020. It shows members of the Kaikuwali Theatre Group from Waema, shortly before performing. "I made friends with the leader of the group," Napierala says. "Consequently, I had a chance to take many pictures and after the festival I was invited to their village where I put on their traditional costume. I had an absolutely awesome time with them." Bougainville

BECKONS

Richard Andrews
reports on a journey into Bougainville, which included a cultural show seen by foreigners for the first time.

A presidential welcome from a former rebel leader; impassable routes; an outlaw jungle king; a 'missing' mountain; pristine beaches; stunning coral reefs; the hidden plane wreck of Pearl Harbour's mastermind; and a first for foreigners at a unique event.

All on the daily agenda for Lisa Pagotto.

Pagotto's recent expedition to Bougainville opened the path for further adventures in previously closed areas of Papua New Guinea's autonomous archipelago.

Pagotto, 38, spent two years with local contacts in Bougainville, setting up the trip for a Sydney-based travel company she founded. Crooked Compass organises custom tours for small groups of adventurers who prefer the 'road less travelled' to five-star vacations.

But as it turned out, the start of the Bougainville journey was not that rough.

"When we arrived in Buka from Port Moresby, an official entourage had been arranged for us," says Pagotto.

"We were welcomed by President Ishmael Toroama who chartered a Cessna Caravan to fly us down south to Buin, with his tourism minister, Patrick Nisira. ►

Warriors from Buin lead the march into the festival grounds for the opening ceremony of the Siwai Cultural Show (left); children from the Unity Faith Play School meet foreigners for the first time (above).

Children get into the spirit of the Siwai Cultural Show (top); village life in South Bougainville is simple, yet beautiful (above); the Panguna Mine, slowly succumbing to the wilds of the jungle that entangle the island of Bougainville.

Pagotto says the arrival of the first aircraft to land on Buin's new grass airstrip attracted huge interest.

"The local police were out in force and hundreds of children ran across the runway to greet us. We were told some had never seen a plane or white people before."

That's about to change if the president and community leaders have their way.

"Tourism has the potential to provide much needed revenue for Bougainville while promoting Bougainville's cultural heritage," says Toroama.

Toroama sees tourism as important for Bougainville's economic development as it negotiates with the PNG government for independence, following a referendum in 2019.

"All sides in the civil war united to organise the Siwai Cultural Show in 2021, to celebrate the southern district's cultural, historical and natural wonders," says Pagotto.

"Only local villagers participated the first time, because borders were closed. But in 2022, we were the first and only foreigners invited to see the second show."

Pagotto's group included seven well-seasoned travellers from Australia, Germany and the US.

"They got close and personal with their friendly hosts, eating the local food, listening to traditional sing sings and watching the impressive bamboo drumming."

At one ceremony, participants hoisted two of the visitors on their shoulders, in the way other villagers carried young men who were wearing the traditional upe headdress.

"It was all in good fun as the upe signifies the wearer is unmarried and still in training as a hunter-gatherer, to be paraded publicly in this way," says Pagotto.

Less traditional sights were the crumbled bunkers, shipwrecks and other World War 2 relics that litter parts of Bougainville.

"We saw one hut built on top of an old cannon and houses with big tanks or artillery in the yard," says Pagotto. "Even under clotheslines."

Perhaps the best-known relic in the south is the crashed military plane that carried ➤

7 THINGS TO KNOW ABOUT BOUGAINVILLE

- 1 The autonomous region of Bougainville comprises two main islands: Bougainville Island and Buka Island. There are also many smaller islands in the region. The three main towns are the capital Buka Town, Arawa and Buin.
- 2 The autonomous region of Bougainville is seeking independence from PNG by 2027, pending approval by the PNG government.
- 3 The Panguna copper and gold mine was one of the world's largest open-cut mines.
- 4 There are talks of re-opening the mine. It was closed in 1989 because of the Bougainville Civil War, also known as the 'conflict'.
- 5 The armed 'conflict' between landowners and PNG government forces lasted from 1988 to 1998 and was brought about by a landowner rebellion. The landowners felt they were being exploited by the mine and were also worried about environmental damage.
- 6 Bougainville has a population of 300,000 and the people who live there are known as Bougainvilleans.
- 7 Diving, snorkelling, fishing and bird watching are key tourism activities.

Japanese Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto – the mastermind behind the 1941 attack on Pearl Harbour.

“The Yamamoto plane wreck lies on land contested by three different clans,” says Pagotto.

“Chiefs from all three accompanied us through the jungle to the wreck, which was hidden by foliage. They competed with their machetes to quickly clear the site.” ➤

It is no secret that in an increasingly digitally connected world, meaningful connectivity can go hand-in-hand with socioeconomic empowerment. Internet access has been firmly established as a core part of our everyday lives. In many parts of PNG, the growing demand for internet access remains unmet, one of which is challenging geographies where fibre lines cannot be pulled.

Banishing Digital Darkness

A Catalyst for Change for Internet users in Papua New Guinea

Lightspeed PNG has recently provided a communications solution for St Gerard's Veifa'a Health Centre, a remote clinic in Kairuku District, Central Province. Using Lightspeed Reach Satellite Broadband and Lightspeed Helios Off Grid Solar kits, the team was successfully able to deliver up to 55 Mbps of satellite internet for the clinic and also setup their network.

“With Lightspeed's Internet services, I am able to communicate with other colleagues in terms of patient management. As a lone doctor in a rural setting, there are times when I need a second opinion on how to manage my patients and so such an internet service will help me relay important patient information to colleagues who can then provide the much-needed feedback in real time. We needed a reliable and affordable internet service and Lightspeed has certainly delivered that for us.”

Not so quick was the four-wheel drive from Siwai to Arawa, on the southeast coast, which was meant to take two hours.

“The river crossing was flooded, and a vehicle was stuck in the middle. We had to take a 12-hour detour over the world’s most terrible roads. The upside was that we saw a lot of the island we wouldn’t have visited otherwise.”

On the way to Arawa, the group passed the so-called Twin Kingdoms of Me’ekamui and Papaala, ‘ruled’ by the self-styled King David Peii II.

The reclusive Pentecostal Christian declares his edicts in biblical terms and has issued his own worthless currency. Photos show the king wearing a 5kg gold crown, although observers suspect it’s made of brass.

“The kingdom is really just a village with a ‘sovereign nation’ sign outside,” says Pagotto.

“We were curious to meet King David and visit his realm, but the Royal Protocol Manager denied an audience.”

However, the group did visit a site of real wealth: the Panguna mine, which was at the centre of the civil war. Disused for more than 30 years, the massive open-cut mine was once one of the world’s largest and most profitable copper and gold mines. Its reserves are estimated at about AUD$60 billion and reopening the derelict mine is under discussion with landowners.

“It’s an awe-inspiring site when you’re perched on Panguna’s rim,” says Pagotto. “Especially as, as one local pointed out, there used to be a mountain here.”

Back in Buka, the group chartered a boat to cruise the nearby islands and end the trip with a beach barbecue.

“We spent the last day snorkelling the beautiful reefs in the warm water of one island. There’s incredible marine life just metres from shore.”

Pagotto’s travels have taken her from the eagle hunters of Kazakhstan to the Sacred Valley of the Incas, but she has a particular fascination with PNG. ➤

VILLAGE CULTURE, JUNGLES, WATERFALLS, EMPTY ROLLING WAVES

A surfer's paradise

BY ROBERT UPE

After two abandoned surf seasons because of COVID-19, the Vanimo Surf Lodge in the far northwestern reaches of Papua New Guinea has reopened.

The PNG surfing season runs from November until the end of April and bookings for the lodge are solid once again.

But don't expect a crowd. The lodge sleeps just 16 and there are eight named breaks to choose from. Usually there are just four to six surfers in the water.

"Often you can have a break to just you and your friends," says Managing Director Dave Ryan.

of the lodge. "You step out of your cabin and right onto the sandy beach, with an easy paddle out to the line-up," Ryan says.

The set-up is pretty well perfect. If Lido Right is onshore then Lido Left is offshore, and vice-versa.

The waves break over smooth limestone rock covered by sea grass, so there's no coral to contend with.

There are more waves at Town Beach, where the surf breaks over sand and is usually ideal for beginners, or you can access some breaks further away with the lodge's surf trucks and boat. Among those breaks is Yako, a high-performance left-hand wave. ➤

The lodge consists of four West Sepik traditional-style huts with four single beds each. Linen, towels and mosquito nets are provided, and each of the huts has a verandah that looks over Lido Right.

There is a common shower and toilet block, and a kitchen and dining hut. Meals are part of the deal, and you can expect plenty of local produce and fresh seafood.

In between surfs, guided waterfall walks, fishing, village visits, bird watching, snorkelling, swimming, table tennis and darts are available.

“It’s the uncrowded and consistent surf that makes this place so special,” says Ryan. “The water is clear and 29 degrees, the locals are friendly, and we’re in a West Sepik village setting.

The good news for surfers is that all of PNG's key surf camps and boats are back to full operation following the COVID-19 interruption, including Tupira Surf Club, north of Madang, which was also forced to close for a long period.

A new surf camp has also opened in Bougainville this surf season.

For a full list of the surf camps and boats available around the country, see the Surfing Association of Papua New Guinea website at sapng.com.

✈ Air Niugini flies from Port Moresby to Vanimo daily. Surfers arriving from Australia can catch a 10.30am flight from Brisbane to Port Moresby, and then connect to Vanimo for a 5pm arrival. See airniugini.com.pg.

SURFBOARDS ON PLANES

Air Niugini uses Fokker 100 and Fokker 70 aircraft on its Vanimo route.

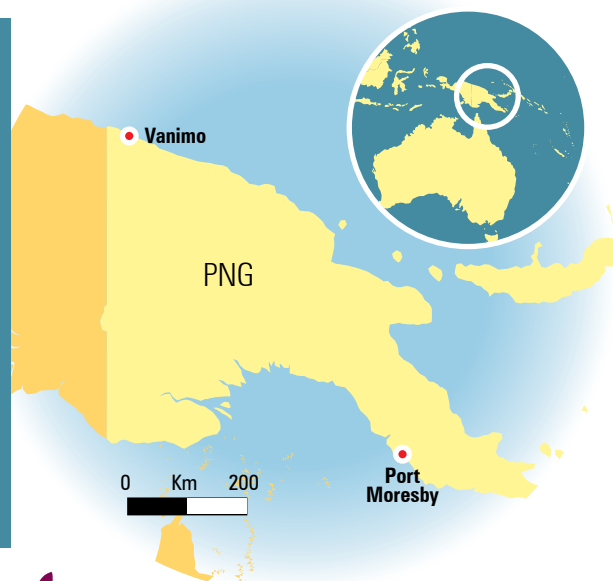

The Fokkers can carry surfboards in enclosed surfboard bags (preferably with fins removed) up to a length of 277cm (9ft).

The same applies to Air Niugini's international flights.

Surfboards carried on Air Niugini's smaller Dash 8 aircraft cannot exceed 240cm (7ft8in).

There is no charge to carry surfboards if total baggage (including hand luggage and checked-in luggage) does not exceed 32kg (for economy passengers).

Surfboards exceeding length specifications can be sent as freight, with applicable charges, however in some cases the boards may be carried in a different aircraft to the passenger.

MY PNG BY NATALIE CHOLOHEI

Weekend escape out of the city

Our writer packs her bags after work on a Friday evening and heads into another world, just a short drive from Port Moresby.

For me, travelling isn't just about getting on the plane and going to another province or country; it is about packing my bag and taking a long drive out of Port Moresby, to go camping or to a local village for the weekend.

Recently, my partner and I travelled to the Koitaki Country Club to get away from the city's hustle and bustle, and heat.

We set out as soon as we finished work on a Friday. I had been so excited that I had already been thinking of what to pack and

We woke up to birds chirping and roosters crowing from afar, telling us to get up and see the beautiful scenery.

take on the trip several days earlier. Driving up into the Sogeri Plateau in the evening is a little more daunting than during the day, but I was glad when we reached the red-soil road leading into the club. The cool night breeze was refreshing and relieving. I am not good with cold, but this was refreshing in the best possible way. Our room was small and cosy, and had a balcony. The next morning we woke up to birds chirping and roosters crowing from afar, as if telling us to get up and see the beautiful scenery.

It looks so easy to reach the top of the hills behind the cabins, but our morning climb up there took longer than I thought. I had to stop every 10 strides to catch my breath.

The view looking down at the main club house and the nine-hole golf course is spectacular, so the effort to get to the top of the hill was well worth it.

I love the atmosphere here, the friendly staff and the good food.

I'm not so much of a food critic, but I can say the club's chicken schnitzel and grilled lamb with potato wedges are very good.

There's also a barbecue near a creek, where you can have dinner and catch sunsets, and the Varirata National Park is nearby.

I've come to love this place and I use every excuse to come here to escape the city. It's all about relaxing and enjoying the nice scenery, unwinding over nice food, and good company.

It is one of life's little wins. ■

HONG KONG

BY BRIAN JOHNSTON

Hong Kong is perennially pulsating, and a visit to the scintillating harbour city will provide you plenty of novelty, from new hotels and restaurants to an entire cultural venue, as well as additions to classic attractions such as Ocean Park's Water World (waterworld.oceanpark.com.hk) and Hong Kong Disneyland Resort (hongkongdisneyland.com).

Among new hotels is everything from the sleek New Territories beach resort WM Hotel Sai Jung (wmhotel.hk) to urban boutique Hotel 1936 (hotel1936.com) in a heritage building in bustling Kowloon. In June 2022, MGallery Hotel Collection opened its first Hong Kong hotel, The Silveri (thesilveri-hongkong.com) on Lantau Island near the airport, quickly followed by AKI Hong Kong (aki-hongkong-mgallery.com) in busy Wan Chai.

The dining scene remains as vibrant as ever. LOCATION

Katong is a foodie paradise on an island known for its food. This area, sandwiched conveniently between the centre of Singapore and the airport, is home to the famous Singaporean laksa (Katong 328 and others) but also to modern food trends like the island's newfound love of natural wines on display at the Drunken Farmer. Katong is full of historic, colourful shophouses that you have a great view over from one of the tallest buildings in the 'hood.

THE PLACE

The public areas of Hotel Indigo are a riot of colour thanks to the celebration of Peranakan culture. Reception uses traditional tiles and has a modern art sculpture version of traditional water jars dominating the area by the lifts. There is a relaxing rooftop pool and, to the left of reception, a 'mama stall' – a small convenience stall that used to be found in the housing estates in the '60s – packed with bright-coloured clothing, fabrics and decorative wooden screens.

ROOMS

The rooms continue your immersion in Peranakan history with murals on the wall of local kampong (village) life, plus the rooms are designed to mimic the flow of a historic

Singapore bungalow. The rooms are about 30 square metres but pack in a lot of special features from a foot-soaking bowl to an historic sewing machine. The bathroom has a killer view with floor-to-ceiling windows looking over the historic neighbourhood; lighting is clever with a rooftop strip mimicking the local tile design and the bathroom mirror lighting up with a decal of an old vanity mirror. There is careful curation everywhere you look.

FOOD AND DRINK

Baba Chews is an all-day diner on the ground floor that has an international menu. It has a mix of modern European and Singaporean dishes with a Western-Asian breakfast menu and pub vibe after dinner. Your morning coffee comes from local roasters Common Man Coffee around the corner from the hotel.

WHAT GUESTS LIKE

FOUR SEASONS HOTEL, SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA

Just footsteps to the harbour, the Four Seasons sits in a prime location at the junction of Circular Quay, the city's historic district The Rocks to the north and the CBD gateway to the south. This position has made the hotel one of the most popular places for visitors to not only explore the city but also secure a guest room or suite where they can take in sweeping views of Sydney's iconic harbour – a panorama that extends from the Sydney Harbour Bridge to the Opera House and far beyond. The entire hotel underwent a multi-million dollar upgrade a few years ago.

SOMETHING SPECIAL

The Four Seasons Sydney recently debuted its revamped a la carte offering, Mode Kitchen & Bar, where diners can experience a taste of Italy. Mode's chef Francesco Mannelli hails from Florence, has worked in some of Italy's and Australia's best restaurants, and whips up the cuisine of his home country like few others in Sydney.

HOW TO EXPERIENCE IT

When you book into the Four Seasons Sydney be sure to ask for a room with a view.

SHERATON RESORT & SPA, TOKORIKI ISLAND, FIJI

There are few places more relaxing than a beachfront hotel villa. Those at Fiji's Sheraton Resort & Spa on Tokoriki Island, however, are a cut above – each villa featuring the ultimate luxury of its own plunge pool and oversized outdoor designer lounge chair (perfect for two) on the deck. Views of the ocean and neighbouring islands in Fiji's Mamanuca chain can be enjoyed from inside the villas too, even from the beds thanks to their position in front of sliding glass doors. Each villa's deck is private, flanked by high walls and surrounded by manicured garden, creating the ideal place to kick back, relax and gaze across the sparkling blue water.

SOMETHING SPECIAL

At dusk, make sure you are at the Coco Palms terrace fronting the resort's main restaurant, Waitui House and Sala Bar. This is when a highly entertaining troupe of Fijian entertainers appear nightly to sing and dance.

HOW TO EXPERIENCE IT

This resort is reached by private transfer (or helicopter if you so desire) from Fiji's main harbour on Denarau Island.

South Pacific Brewery office workers, Port Moresby, 1980s

South Pacific Brewery (SP) celebrated its 70th anniversary in 2022. The first brewery in Papua New Guinea was built on Scratchley Road in Badili by SP in 1952.

Two years later, most of its shares were acquired by Malaysian Breweries Limited, themselves affiliated with Heineken.

SP's early years were relatively unprofitable, but all that changed in 1962 when Papua New Guineans were allowed to consume alcohol, and this drastically expanded the customer base.

The main products in those early years were draught kegs, SP Green and SP Brown bottles, each variety with its own staunch supporters.

SP is still associated with Heineken and employs many Papua New Guineans in technical and administrative roles.

Making Business Easy.

PNG's leading business
& logistics park.

www.aespng.com

PNG's Leading Business & Logistics Park

The PNG Business and Logistics Park is strategically located in the growth corridor between the Port Moresby CBD and the expanding LNG plant. Central to the attractiveness of the 94-hectare development, is its privately owned port and container terminal, complete with 540 metres of wharf and a suite of on-site logistics services and infrastructure. Tenants, including oil and gas majors, as well as operators in their supply chains, enjoy purpose-built facilities and even on-site accommodation.

The PNG Business and Logistics Park is privately owned and operated by AES, a local company employing 450 staff. AES has nearly 70 years' experience delivering large-scale engineering, civil, and construction projects throughout PNG.

AES Principal, Dom Avenell, emphasises that there are several important drawcards to the business park but that its modern and well-equipped port with more than 500 metres of berth is key. "Many of our tenants have a port requirement, and we are the only industrial park in the country that has its own port. We not only provide the full range of services you'd normally associate with a port and container terminal, but we're also a project cargo specialist providing shore base logistics and staging."

Another key drawcard for the business park is AES' proven capacity to provide tenants with just about any kind of facility, as well as all of the necessary infrastructure specific to industry and operational requirements. AES has the in-house expertise to do this, as well as an enormous amount of space (ideal for when tenants need to scale up).

Examples of facilities AES has provided its tenants with, include dangerous goods storage, specialised workshops, cement silos and truck loading facilities, petroleum storage and bunkers.

Another feature of the PNG Business and Logistics Park that appeals to tenants, are its safety systems and credentials. The business park meets PNG and international safety standards, and AES is ISO certified (i.e., 45001, 14001, 9001).

In addition to these certifications, the business park's restaurant and mess facilities that support its 300-person camp, are HACCP certified. Residents that choose to live in the park's leafy and secure housing estate (45 x 1-3 bedroom homes) also enjoy these facilities, as well as recreational facilities and a private medical clinic.

To learn more about the PNG Business and Logistics Park: pom@aespng.com

The PNG Business and Logistics Park is ideal for businesses wanting to establish a strategic operational base and capitalise on its privately owned port and container terminal within minutes of the Port Moresby CBD and expanding LNG plant.

A Message from Peter Larden, Chairman and Managing Director at ExxonMobil PNG Limited

As ExxonMobil celebrates 100 years of continuous business in Papua New Guinea, we reflect not just on the past century, but on the potential ahead.

We are proud of the legacy we have built, we are proud of the partnerships we have created, and we are committed to strengthening our collaboration with all stakeholders going forward.

In 1922 our downstream business started our journey in this great country with a small fuel products business in Rabaul to supply the emerging local customer base.

ExxonMobil PNG Chairman and Managing Director Peter Larden with the next generation of technical leaders from the PNG LNG Project's Operations and Maintenance trainee program.

Since then, ExxonMobil has focused on opportunities to grow its Papua New Guinean presence. Our continued confidence in PNG led to what you see today, a world class LNG operation and a robust pipeline of investment potential.

ExxonMobil has a proven history of generating value for the State, local landowners, and the people of Papua New Guinea.

ExxonMobil PNG Chairman and Managing Director, Peter Larden (third from right), meets with the Angore Project Pipeline and Construction team.

This success is thanks to the efforts of our Papua New Guinean workforce and the strength of our collaboration with all levels of government, local businesses, partners, and the diverse communities in the areas where we operate.

My journey in Papua New Guinea started 13 years ago, and every minute has been a privilege. From my first role working in the early phase of the PNG LNG Project's construction through today I have been amazed not only by what was being achieved, but by how it was being achieved. Under the leadership of my predecessors Peter Graham and Andrew Barry, ExxonMobil PNG Limited, as operator of the PNG LNG Project, has helped place Papua New Guinea firmly on the world's LNG map.

While there are many highlights, what stands out for me is how our Papua New Guinean workforce has and continues to set and surpass the highest of standards each and every day. I constantly learn from and am humbled by the efforts of this team, and truly cherish the opportunity to be here in this wonderful country.

Today, ExxonMobil continues to invest in initiatives across our downstream and upstream businesses. We are fiercely passionate about helping create a positive future for all Papua New Guineans, and I remain excited about what Papua New Guinea is and can become.

Anne-Sophie Hermann, Founder - Buk bilong Pikinini

"For a decade, our partnership with ExxonMobil PNG has helped foster a life-long love of reading and learning that is increasing literacy rates and empowering Papua New Guinean children."

"ExxonMobil PNG is truly investing in the future healthcare of PNG through the next generation of doctors which will continue to have an impact for years to come."

Dr. Henry Welch, Assistant Professor of Paediatrics - Baylor College of Medicine and Texas Children's Global Tuberculosis Program

Larry Andagali, Managing Director - Trans Wonderland Limited (TWL)

"I worked with ExxonMobil PNG in 2001, I worked with them between 2005 and 2007 during PNG LNG FEED and I have worked with them from 2010 to now. ExxonMobil PNG's partnership with companies like TWL is very important because we can learn from their success and become sustainable just like they have been for the past 100 years."

"I've seen change in people's lives, and I am grateful for the PNG LNG Project. To me, sustainability is when we as people can experience lasting impacts from projects like this."

Sally Pake, Owner - Mo-Ha Trading

Paul Bluett, Chairman and Founder - Islands Petroleum

"We grew the business together and we are now one of the largest distributors in Papua New Guinea. We enjoy the stability of a relationship with ExxonMobil PNG, and it has enabled us to expand our business."

"The four plant-side villages have benefitted from the PNG LNG Project. ExxonMobil PNG as the developer is our partner in this business and has contributed to our communities."

Igo Rei, Chairman of the Board at Laba Holdings Limited

Libe Parindali, Chairman - Hides Gas Development Company Energy Services (HGDC)

"We consider ExxonMobil PNG here as our big brother, as our friend, a serious corporate citizen in the community. Because of them we are here."

"The PNG LNG Kumuls partnership, through ExxonMobil PNG, has had a huge impact on the sport over the past ten years by helping us invest in our domestic pathways, our high-performance programs."

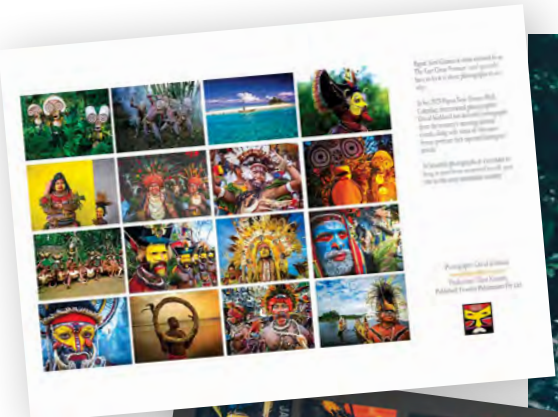

Sandis Tsaka, Chairman - Papua New Guinea Rugby Football League

THE YEAR AHEAD

Prolific photographer of Papua New Guinea David Kirkland (left) has released a calendar of some of his favourite photos taken in the country.

The calendar features portraits and photos from cultural events. Among them are the Asaro Mudmen (see them on our cover), Huli Wigmen, a Tufi woman with full-facial tattoo (above) and the Sepik River man (opposite) who wears elaborate body decorations made from shells that are bound together by natural fibres.

"The theme of the calendar is to celebrate PNG's rich traditional culture by featuring strong images of men and women dressed in their traditional bilas (costumes)," Kirkland says.

"I've been photographing PNG for more than 30 years and travelled the world on assignment, but PNG remains one of the most fascinating places on the planet because of the diversity and richness of its culture," he says. "For a photographer, it simply doesn't get much better."

The calendar has been released in two formats: a standard-sized A4 wall calendar and a limited-edition A3 version. ■

The A4 calendars are available for PGK75 through Chin H Meen's retail outlets in PNG, including the shop A Little Something from PNG at Jacksons Airport. The limited-edition calendars (only 500 have been released) are AUD$50 each and can only be purchased by ordering directly at david@kirklandphotos.com.

A SNAPSHOT OF INDEPENDENCE

Photographer Godfreeman Kaptigau caught the colour of Independence celebrations in Port Moresby on September 16.

“There wasn’t a single place that wasn’t painted, draped or clothed in black, red and yellow (the traditional colours of Papua New Guinea),” he says.

The country’s 47th Independence celebrations included traditional dancing and music representing all of the country’s provinces at the University of PNG, a bilas fashion show organised by Yumi-FM at Vision City Mega Mall, and smaller community events like those staged at the Bagita Police Barracks in Waigani. ■

ROYAL MEMORIES

Sadness fell over Papua New Guinea with the death of Queen Elizabeth II on September 8 at the age of 96.

The Queen reigned for 70 years and visited PNG three times – in 1984, 1977 and 1982 – with Prince Philip, the Duke of Edinburgh. She was affectionately known by many Papua New Guineans as Missis Kwin.

The Prime Minister, James Marape, attended the Queen’s funeral at Westminster Abbey in London and expressed the nation’s deep affection for the Queen to the new monarch, King Charles III.

The PM was among more than 100 world leaders at the state funeral. During a meeting with King Charles, he invited the new monarch to visit PNG.

The conversation was reported like this: “Your Majesty, if you don’t mind. In three years’ time, your country Papua New Guinea will be celebrating 50 years of Independence. I would like to, on behalf of your people in PNG, place a call to you, if you can be our chief guest on that occasion.”

King Charles replied: “That’s so kind of you, I shall see what I can do. I should have to brush up my Pidgin to make sure. But many, many thanks and my kindest thoughts and wishes to you. I absolutely love Papua New Guinea, which I hold very much in my heart.”

PNG is one of five countries in Asia and the Pacific where the British monarch is head of state. They also include Australia, New Zealand, the Solomon Islands and Tuvalu. ■

WINE GURU

Q: Why are corks in wine bottles being replaced by screw caps?

A: No one is exactly sure who first used cork to keep wine in the bottle, but it is often credited to Dom Perignon, one of the monks responsible for creating French champagne. That was in the 17th century and for over 200 years the pop of a cork became synonymous with celebration and good times.

There is, however, one problem with a cork stopper: it can taint the wine, rendering it 'corked'. A wine is corked when it reacts with the trichloroanisole (TCA), a tiny molecule found in wine that only begins to react when it is sealed with a cork; TCA-tainted wine smells and tastes terrible, with some drinkers describing a bad wine as having the scent of a wet dog.

One way to avoid this problem is to use screw caps that do not contain cork. These caps not only protect the wine better, but also are cheaper, more efficient and easier to open.

Screw caps were first adapted for wine bottles in the 1950s. They are made of aluminium with a coating of polyethylene that seals and protects the wine. If your wine is sealed with a screw cap it is very unlikely to be corked or spoiled in any way.

Screw caps were once used for only the cheapest and nastiest wines but in 2022 almost a third of wine bottles around the world are screw cap, including most that you can buy in Papua New Guinea. But the uptake is slow in traditional regions like France.

Screw caps are likely here to stay, but expect cork to linger because it will be a long time before the French establishment fully commits to this new technology. Vive la cork! ■

BACCHUS RESTAURANT, AIRWAYS HOTEL, PORT MORESBY PNG REVIEW

Bacchus is back, and almost as you know it. The grande dame of Port Moresby’s fine dining scene underwent a thorough renovation during COVID-19. When we visited on a Saturday evening it was looking sleek but had not lost any of its old charm.

The menu also has a familiar ring to it. It makes the most of Papua New Guinea’s outstanding fish and seafood, features a selection of decadent wagyu steaks and, of course, includes the signature crepe suzette, dramatically flambeed at your table.

My wagyu tenderloin was a real treat, cooked perfectly and served with peppercorn sauce, truffle mash and excellent locally grown vegetables. Another highlight was the pistachio and coriander crusted scallops (delightfully complemented with mushroom puree and crispy prosciutto), while you can’t go wrong with the catch of the day.

The service was pleasant and faultless, right down to a good matching wine recommendation. If you feel like being spoilt, then Bacchus is still the place to go. ■

5 QUESTIONS FOR IAN KEMISH

DIPLOMAT AND AUTHOR OF THE CONSUL

Former diplomat Ian Kemish has written an insider's account about the largely unknown world of Australia's diplomatic service, in which he was confronted with some of the most dramatic events in the world, including the September 11 attacks, the Boxing Day tsunami and the Bali bombings.

Among other appointments around the globe, he served as the Australian High Commissioner to Papua New Guinea from 2010 to 2013.

Here, he speaks exclusively to Paradise about his time in PNG.

Q: Can you tell us a bit about your childhood in PNG?

A: I had a truly happy childhood in PNG, living in Lae, Rabaul and Port Moresby. I look back at my time at Waigani Primary School in the early 1970s, and my Papua New Guinean friends, with great fondness. I made friendships then that remain strong today.

Q: Why did you want to go back there as the Australian High Commissioner to Papua New Guinea?

A: The position is one of the most important in the Australian foreign service. The relationship with PNG is of fundamental importance to Australia – from a strategic, economic and cultural perspective. It's one of Australia's largest overseas missions, and our largest development cooperation and defence cooperation

The kindness and strength of the PNG people surprises many. I was often struck by these attributes.

Ian Kemish served as the Australian High Commissioner to PNG and has written a book about his experiences in the diplomatic corp.

program. So, the primary reason was professional. But of course, my childhood in PNG gave me an additional reason to apply for the role. I was delighted when I was chosen. Part of my role was to support mutual understanding between our two nations. Fortunately, our interests are inseparable – PNG's prosperity and security are in Australia's interests.

Q: What surprised you about PNG?

A: The kindness and strength of the people surprises many. I was often struck by these attributes, although perhaps I was less surprised than most given my background.

Q: What were the key issues you faced in PNG?

A: Supporting the growth of the PNG economy through technical assistance and development support, helping maintain a calm and supportive relationship through a period of considerable political turmoil, and providing extensive civil and defence logistical support for the 2012 elections.

Q: What are some of your fondest memories in PNG?

A: Exploring childhood haunts, meeting old friends, travelling in the islands, highlands, and coastal regions of this wonderful country. ■

THE ROYALS

Queen of Our Times: The Life of Elizabeth II By Robert Hardman (Pan Macmillan)

Renowned writer and broadcaster Robert Hardman started reporting about the monarchy over 30 years ago. He has spoken to sources who met the Queen and has had access to unpublished papers from the Royal Archives to write Queen of Our Times, his third book about Elizabeth II (1926–2022). Mixing history, research and anecdotes, including that of Barack Obama's first visit to Buckingham Palace, Hardman paints a detailed picture of the Queen to highlight her legacy and try to define her reign. Starting in 1925 and culminating in 2019 for her Platinum Jubilee, the book highlights the Queen's love for her job, her relationship with her husband and her capacity to not dwell in the past. From her coronation to COVID-19 and the most recent controversies around her family, Queen of Our Times is one of Elizabeth II's most complete and intimate biographies.

WAR

Should We Fall to Ruin By Harrison Christian (Ultimo Press)

Also available as an audiobook

In 1942, Japanese forces invaded New Guinea, then part of Australia. There, a small garrison of Allied soldiers, known as Lark Force, put up a fierce resistance and fought the Japanese in the port of Rabaul, later escaping into the jungle. Their efforts had been long forgotten, until now. In Should We Fall to Ruin, New Zealand journalist and writer Harrison Christian draws from first-person accounts and explores this chapter of World War 2 history. The book tells us what happened to these soldiers and nurses who had no means to escape the island. With a gripping prose, Christian sheds light on a forgotten yet important chapter of the war. ■

AT THE MOVIES

What's happening in the world of cinema

FAMOUS FACES LINE UP FOR AWARDS

The Academy Awards will be held on March 13, which means all the big award wannabes are making their way on to screens across the globe. That means cinemas as well as streaming on television.

As usual, there is a very heavy slate of biopics for audiences to watch because the Academy loves nothing more than famous people portraying other famous people.

Baz Luhrmann's Elvis was a big hit in 2022. Netflix recently released the (partly fictionalised) Marilyn Monroe biopic Blonde starring Ana De Armas (Knives Out) to very loud controversy. This is because many viewers have suggested it is obsessed with her many R-rated traumas instead of her ground-breaking achievements in Hollywood.

Elsewhere in 2022 and 2023, there are movies, there are movies about Whitney Houston, Golda Meir, civil rights icon Mamie Till and the heroes of the Thai cave rescue.

Despite all of those names, the most likely to be a hit with Oscar voters may be Meet the Fablemans. This autobiographical drama from Steven Spielberg follows his own journey to becoming the most famous film director of all time. Who can resist?

MALAYSIAN ACTRESS HAS OSCAR IN HER SIGHTS

Speaking of the Academy Awards, the 95-year-old institution could be on the verge of breaking one of its most shameful streaks. Michelle Yeoh is currently in a strong position to become the first woman of Asian descent to win a Best Actress Oscar.

Her performance in the beloved Everything Everywhere All at Once is a blend of her varied acting history, fusing drama with comedy and adding kung-fu. She wasn't labelled the female Jackie Chan for nothing!

Yeoh will likely face off against big names like Australia's Cate Blanchett (Tar) and Margot Robbie (Babylon), Viola Davis (The Woman King) and Ana De Armas (Blonde).

Only one Asian performer has won an Academy Award, and that was Miyoshi Umeki for Sayonara way back in 1959.

Yeoh's sparring partner, Ke Huy Quan, is also considered a strong contender for his comeback performance after having quit acting for decades after Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom and The Goonies in the 1980s.

PREVIEW

Avatar: The Way of Water

Cast: Sam Worthington, Zoe Saldana, Kate Winslet

A re-release of the record-breaking Avatar delivered strong box office returns in October. It's rare for a 13-year-old film to return to cinemas and to do so well again, but this science fiction adventure has indeed proven more successful than many brand-new releases.

This is no doubt thanks to its combination of groundbreaking 3D technology and digital remastering. The film's re-release was in anticipation of the sequel Avatar: The Way of Water.

Technical innovation is at the new movie's forefront, and for this edition actors trained underwater so that they could remain in massive water tanks for minutes at a time while being filmed by 3D cameras.

The result is something truly spectacular – the Avatars look like no other movies ever made. It's why the original made $US2 billion at the international box office and why the new one may just match it.

WHAT TO WATCH IN CINEMAS

December

The Banshees of Inisherin. Colin Farrell is remarkable in this laugh-out-loud funny Irish movie that is a reunion for the team behind In Bruges.

January

I Wanna Dance with Somebody. Naomi Ackie stars as Whitney Houston in this biopic.

February

Magic Mike's Last Dance. This comedy with Channing Tatum is based on his own life experiences before he was a huge star.

Port Moresby's Paradise Cinema screens many of the movies mentioned in 'At the Movies'. For screening dates and session times see paradisecinemaspng.com.

MADE IN PNG

A SPECIAL FEATURE

THE COUNTRY'S PRIDE & JOY

Great things are happening in Papua New Guinea, and in this special feature we celebrate some of the country's manufacturing success stories.

Products made and created in PNG come in many forms, from chocolates and beer, to bridges and bricks.

This PNG ingenuity is derived from a variety of sectors, including smallholder businesses, creative minds working in the fields of fashion and technology, and bigger companies that have become household names.

They include companies like Monier, which employs hundreds of Papua New Guineans and is the biggest manufacturer of construction materials in the country, Trukai Industries, which is a leading supplier of rice, South Pacific Brewery, famous for its SP beers, and Paradise Foods, one of the country's biggest food manufacturers.

On the following pages we go behind the scenes of some of these companies and tell the stories of their remarkable enterprises.

PICTURE: GODFREMAN KAPTIGAU

STRONG FOUNDATIONS IN PNG

When it comes to construction, Monier is the largest producer, supplier and distributor of construction materials and building products in Papua New Guinea. The products are used in everything from major projects to home renovations.

The Port Moresby based company employs about 300 staff, most of them Papua New Guineans, and has been in business in the country for more than 60 years.

Just look around town, and you'll find somewhere that Monier has been involved, including the LNG Project, APEC Haus, the Hilton Hotel, the ExxonMobil headquarters, several embassy buildings, the John Guise Stadium, and the Kumul overpass.

The name Monier dates to 1887, when Joseph Monier exhibited his inventions of iron mesh-reinforced concrete in the Paris Exposition. The modern day Monier, based in PNG, was established in 1958 and was purchased in 2005 by the late Chief Sir Theophilus G. Constantinou.

Monier operates several divisions, including quarry and sand material supply, ready-mix concrete supply, and finished concrete products. The latter consists of a specialist pre-cast division, a reinforced concrete pipes division, Masonry concrete blocks and a pavers division. Monier also has a specific plastic division known as Monier Water Solutions, which offers a range of water and septic tanks as well as HDPE polyethylene (plastic) pipes.

He says that externally, Monier is committed to the community it operates in, providing funding and facilities for a school in Port Moresby, as well as support for Buk Bilong Pikinini.

Monier products are used in everything from major projects to home renovations.

Monier is part of the Constantinou Group, which places healthcare as a high priority for the community. The organisation provides support to Port Moresby General Hospital through the affiliation with the Sir Theo Foundations and has undertaken projects such as the Port Moresby General Hospital car park upgrade and assisting with the installation of the Lady Maria Constantinou Palliative Care Ward, which opened in 2020. These projects allow for the better allocation of hospital funds.

During the recent pandemic Constantinou Group contributed its services to the healthcare industry to prepare testing centres around Port Moresby, and also contributed much needed funds to assist with the pandemic response at the Port Moresby General Hospital. ■

THE TOAST OF THE NATION

The South Pacific Brewery (SP) is one of the oldest and best-known companies in Papua New Guinea and the brewery's SP lager is one of its most popular products.

The lager, in green cans and brown bottles, first came out on November 26, 1952. It won its first international recognition in 1964 and since then it has won several international Monde Awards, which recognise high quality in consumer goods.

Since the 1950s, SP has played a significant role in supporting various community activities, from sports to cultural events, boat races, music festivals, and even local bands. One of the early sponsorships was for the popular local string band Gwadus.

The current slogan for the beer is bungim yumi, which means bring us together.

The company believes that the national beer does bring Papua new Guineans together to celebrate the great things about the country.

“With all its diversity, only a few national brands can actually bring Papua New Guineans together from all walks of life and that is SP Lager,” says SP Brewery Managing Director Ed Weggemans. ■

RAISING THE ROOF

PNG Forest Products is a company building PNG and the South Pacific, piece by piece.

If you are standing in a school, a health clinic or workers' quarters in Papua New Guinea, there is a fair chance the building has been made by PNG Forest Products (PNGFP).

The Port Moresby based company is the largest supplier of timber housing and infrastructure projects in the South Pacific, delivering more than 10,000 buildings in the region and more than 2000 in PNG, including 1000 PNG school buildings.

PNGFP supplies PNG's only kit-set buildings, engineered to PNG and Australian building codes, that are preservative pressure treated to protect from termites and rotting.

The company also provides pressure-treated pine timber and plywood, and produces kit homes, modular bridges and bridge decking.

The company's Managing Director, Tony Honey, says: "We are producing and

PNGFP is the largest supplier of timber housing and infrastructure projects in the South Pacific.

exporting some innovative and interesting engineered wood products that are value adding to an otherwise basic piece of plywood."

He says modular bridges and decking are being exported to Australia and New Zealand, along with specialised railway bridge re-decking, sound barriers along Australian highways and rail corridors, and scarf-jointed bus and train floors for Australia, New Zealand, and Malaysia.

The origins of the company go back to the early 1920s, when Bulolo Gold Dredging Limited (BGD) was developing alluvial mining operations in the Bulolo Valley.

To facilitate this large-scale operation, housing was needed in the valley for hundreds of workers and their families. So BGD secured timber permits, established a sawmill and joinery, and set about building a town, complete with school and hospital.

By the mid-1930s, eight dredges worked the valley floor, powered by BGD's own hydro-power stations. As the operation grew, so did the town and the need for more timber.

To meet this demand, the Forestry Department eventually established a pine nursery and reforestation program. More than 60,000 pine trees were planted in 1948, and each year thereafter.

When the mining operation scaled down, BGD formed Commonwealth New Guinea Timbers Ltd and constructed a plywood factory. Plywood production and the export of the product overseas started in 1954, signalling the birth of a new industry.

Today, PNGFP employs about 1300 Papua New Guineans and is committed to building a better future through sustainable manufacturing practices.

Timber is sourced from renewable pine plantations managed by PNG Forest Services. Sawdust and wood chip waste from the mills are utilised to power the boilers for the veneer driers and kilns.

PNGFP also works in conjunction with the Department of Environment and Conservation to ensure that the best environmental practices are maintained.

As a further commitment to sustainability, the company's manufacturing facilities in Bulolo are powered by its own hydro-power stations, one of which was originally established by the BGD company in the 1930s.

Operating three hydro-power stations, with a fourth nearing completion, PNGFP is the only independent power producer in the country that supplies hydro-power to PNG Power.

In Bulolo, PNGFP also operates a supermarket, bakery, butchery, liquor store, hardware store, service station, country club, abattoir, poultry farm and a 600-hectare cattle farm, all servicing the town and surrounding districts.

"Our future lies in adding value to our resources, whether it be timber, land or water," says Honey. "Improved recovery from our log supply is essential, as is developing new products for our Pacific region.

"Continuing our diversity through power generation, forest products, and poultry and cattle operations develops employment and sustainable income. Continuing reinvestment in our business is the key to our continued viability and the core to our future success," he says. ■

PNG COFFEE HITS A SWEET SPOT

Mary O'Brien reports that good things are on the brew in PNG.

Papua New Guinea coffee is grown on mountain slopes, in rainforests and along fertile valleys. These areas are remote and coffee farmers often must walk for days over rough terrain to the nearest coffee station to sell their produce.

While we all love our daily coffee, few of us realise the hard work that goes into producing it. The best coffee is the arabica variety, grown by small farmers using traditional methods.

PNG coffee is ranked among the best in the world and often scores at the top end of specialty coffee grades, says coffee exporter Elijah Harro.

"People say our coffee has got a very nice taste – it's balanced, clean and sweet," he says.

Goroka businessman and farmer Harro was delighted with the reaction to the samples he brought to the Melbourne International Coffee Expo in Australia in September. About 25,000 people visited the trade show.

Harro founded Alpha Coffee, a collective of small farmers from the Eastern Highlands, about seven years ago. About 400 farmers supply beans to the collective.

"We represent our small-holder growers, and we want to assist our growers to find a market in Australia," he says.

Coffee is grown in 18 of PNG's 22 provinces and it's the second-most important agricultural commodity, according to the World Coffee Research organisation. While the country supplies less than one per cent of the world's coffee exports, it's the second-largest producer of washed arabica in Asia.

It's also one of the few cash crops in the country and it offers farmers a path out of poverty. In 2019, about 752,000 bags of coffee were produced.

The Eastern Highlands is the second-largest coffee-growing area after the Western Highlands. Alpha Coffee focuses > on single-origin arabica, a mix of the arusha, typica and PNG blue mountain varieties. These typically score between 85 and 89 points (which means 'excellent') on the international Q grading system for coffee.

Harro has his own two-hectare farm near Goroka. If 10 farmers each supply 30 bags of coffee, they will have enough to fill a shipping container and supply roasters directly, he explains.

"We need to explore the possibility of getting the small grower to supply the small roaster and the only way to do it is through the consolidation of their stock," Harro says.

If small holders can sell directly to specialty roasters, they will earn between 25 per cent and 35 per cent more, he says.

The money from coffee helps families pay school fees, increases living standards and improves farming techniques.

Almost all PNG coffee is organic. It's organic by default because farmers use traditional methods and cannot afford pesticides or fertilisers. Unfortunately for PNG growers, it's often too expensive to go through the organic certification process, which takes years.

Quality is essential as small roasters are searching for high-grade coffee beans.

Harro says he had samples from 12 farmers for the expo but rejected eight because they didn't make the grade.

There is a strong demand in Australia, the US, Germany and Japan for quality PNG coffee. As Australia is the closest market, it is the most attractive one. Coffee is shipped and arrives within one to two weeks, and this means farmers are paid quickly.

"The future is bright if Papua New Guinea growers can focus on quality and increasing volume over time," says Jeremy Grennell, Australia's general manager of exports at Pacific Trade Invest.

"Coffee feeds a lot of families, and the coffee industry provides a really good income for those people that grow coffee," he says.

As coffee prices are rising globally, Grennell says Papua New Guinea farmers are in a sweet spot.

The other good news is that since August PNG has had a minister for coffee, which is thought to be the first coffee ministry in the world.

Harro hopes his country's coffee will get to more international shows in the future. "PNG coffee has its own story and it's a story we have to sell to be able to get out our message about it," he says. ■

THE ROASTER: GINA DI BRITA

Australian specialty coffee roaster Gina Di Brita is a big fan of Papua New Guinea beans.

Di Brita, who owns Numero Uno Coffee Roasters in St Peter's in Sydney, is also an international coffee judge.

She says she was blown away when she initially sampled some of the Alpha Coffee.

"PNG coffee is a beautiful bean: it's delicate, it's known for its sweetness and chocolate notes," she says. "It's got a balanced acidity."

She believes this coffee is special because of the environment where it's grown, and the traditional methods used.

"It's quite nice as a single origin and it's good as a filter coffee and we can roast it to suit."

Di Brita co-founded the International Women's Coffee Alliance in Australia and won the Eleonora Genovese Australian Coffee Woman of the Year award in 2019.

She travelled to PNG three years ago and formed a connection with the farming communities there.

"I fell in love with the story and the people behind the coffee," she says.

Di Brita, who used to be a tobacco farmer in Australia's Far North Queensland, understands how difficult it is to grow any produce.

"Being an ex-farmer, I really do connect very quickly and passionately with people of the land."

After suffering setbacks and seeing production drop in recent years, PNG coffee is making a comeback, Di Brita believes. Younger baristas and roasters have yet to discover how good PNG coffee can be.

Women play a very important part in the coffee-growing industry, she says. There are many women growers who own their own coffee gardens.

"The women are such a vital presence in every sector of the coffee journey – they really are the backbone of all the coffee regions.

"Some carry bags of coffee on their heads and walk for a couple of days until they get to a local market to sell their coffee; it's extraordinary."

FEEDING THE NATION

LIFTING THE LID

ON PNG'S FAVOURITE CHOCOLATES

Karina Makori, the General Manager of Queen Emma chocolates, tells Paradise about the business of making chocolate.

Since starting production in 2016, Queen Emma chocolate has become one of Papua New Guinea's most recognised and loved products.

The brand is named after Emma Coe, a Samoan who settled in PNG in 1878, set up large coconut plantations and started growing cocoa.

She became so well respected that she became affectionately known as Queen Emma of New Guinea.

Her namesake chocolate is so popular that today 120 tonnes of it is churned out annually by Paradise Foods Limited, one of the biggest food manufacturing companies in PNG.

Karina Makori, the General Manager of the company's chocolate operation, says the chocolate is natural, with no added preservatives or deodorising agents.

"We use only best cocoa beans bought directly from smallholder farmers, so when you buy a bar of Queen Emma chocolate you know you are helping PNG growers," she says.

How many different chocolates do you make?

Our current range comes in three flavours: dark, milk and white chocolate. We have four sizes, beginning with a small treat-size 15g to the 140g family sharing block. Then, we have a range of catering products used for pastries and desserts, which are easy to use even for home cooks, such as chocolate chips, chocolate buttons and cocoa powder. And for those who want to make their own yummy chocolates, we have ingredients such as cocoa liquor, cocoa butter and roasted cocoa nibs.

Which chocolate bar is most popular?

The most popular is our white chocolate bar. It's a very different taste to usual white chocolate, not too sweet, and it is great for ganache. Several leading cake makers use it for wedding cakes.

What's the secret to the success of the chocolate?

I think the success is in the cocoa beans we use. Our Papua New Guinea cocoa is really an explosion of flavours. There's a variety of bitter, sweet and fruity flavour notes.

Are they sold overseas?

We are already exporting bulk cocoa ingredients like cocoa liquor, butter and powder to Australia and New Zealand. Recently we went overseas to scout the international market and we were overwhelmed with the interest shown for our products. We are in the final stages of embarking on expansion of our chocolate factory, so we are excitedly looking forward to having Queen Emma chocolate bars sold soon in supermarkets internationally.

Are all ingredients, such as cocoa, sourced locally?

Yes, it all comes from PNG. We are currently supporting over 2000 farmers in Bougainville, Morobe, Milne Bay, Madang and Central provinces.

How many people are employed making chocolate?

Our team has grown from two part-time staff hand-making and hand-wrapping chocolates in a small room to 35 full-time Papua New Guinean staff. ■

BIG GAS

What it will mean for PNG businesses

The partners in the Papua LNG gas project – TotalEnergies, ExxonMobil and Santos – provided an extensive briefing late in 2022 about the project to the business community in Port Moresby.

The project is expected to be the single largest constructed in PNG since the completion of the PNG LNG project in 2014, and will provide many opportunities for Papua New Guinean businesses, according to the briefing.

Previous estimates suggest the project, based on the Elk and Antelope gas fields in Gulf Province, will require investment in excess of US$10 billion (PGK35.2 billion).

While a final investment decision (FID) on the project is not expected until the end of 2023, the process of front-end engineering and design has started, and businesses in PNG have been invited to pre-register for both early works contracts, and for work under the expected engineering, procurement and construction (EPC) contracts that will follow FID.

Businesses attending the briefing were advised of the intent to involve local companies wherever possible.

The construction phase of the project, which is expected to take until early 2028, will be managed primarily by TotalEnergies, with ExxonMobil PNG taking responsibility for the expansion of its LNG plant in Caution Bay near Port Moresby, from where the Papua LNG gas will be exported.

According to presentations from TotalEnergies and ExxonMobil PNG, while the project's major EPC contracts won't be issued until after FID, early works are expected to commence upstream at the Elk and Antelope gas fields as early as quarter one of 2023.

These will provide an early opportunity for local businesses to get involved in the project.

Due to the lack of infrastructure close to the fields, 45 kilometres of new roads and bridges will need to be constructed, as well as a new quay, logistical base, and airstrip infrastructure at the project's Herd Base on the Purari River. Early works for this stage will include the construction of a quarry.

Once FID is achieved, work will commence on the construction of an upstream central processing facility close to Herd Base, to process both condensate and gas from the fields. Work on this is planned to commence in quarter two of 2024 and be completed before the end of 2027.

Once processed, the condensate and gas will be sent down a set of parallel pipelines, running 64 kilometres overland to Orokol Bay in Gulf Province, and then for 260 kilometres across the Gulf of Papua to ExxonMobil's LNG Plant at Caution Bay near Port Moresby. Pipeline construction is scheduled to start in early 2024 and finish in quarter one of 2027.

While a formal national content plan of the Papua LNG project had yet to be signed off (when Paradise went to press) by the Minister for Petroleum, Kerenga Kua, businesses attending the briefing were advised of the intent to involve local companies wherever possible. Given the complexity of the project, there are likely to be several levels of cascading contracts operating under the EPC contracts.

Products and services for which the Papua LNG project is seeking expressions of interest include civil works, security, training, transport and logistics, accommodation, catering, ICT services, waste management, medical services, engineering, recruitment, plant equipment supply, construction supplies and food and drinking water supply.

More briefings and forums are expected during 2023 as the project progresses towards FID. ■

5 QUESTIONS FOR MAURO LEONE

Area General Manager of Intercontinental Hotels Group, PNG

The Intercontinental Hotels Group (IHG) is represented by the Holiday Inn & Suites, Holiday Inn Express and the Crowne Plaza Residences in Port Moresby.

Q: How has business been this year?

A: There's no doubt, quarter one provided a rocky start, because we were hoping to continue the great business of providing (COVID-19) quarantine facilities. 2021 was a record year for us. All the Port Moresby hotels did very well. But as of February 1 (2022), all quarantine just about stopped.

Fast forward to quarter three and we did a mid-40 per cent occupancy in the Holiday Inn Express, which is fantastic given the hotel had been closed for two years. A major driver (of guests) for the Express is derived through the Kokoda Trail arrivals, which look to return in March 2023. October was a record month for the group. Our Crowne Plaza Residences did mid-90 per cent occupancy, the Holiday Inn did mid-80 per cent. We think business is going to continue well ...

Q: There are signs that the planned Papua LNG project is starting to influence the economy.

A: The recent project briefings (see our story previous page) showed the different project development phases, and it looks like it starts to ramp up in quarter four of 2023. And that's only one project we're talking about. If all the anticipated projects come onboard, we are not going to have enough rooms or apartments in Port Moresby. In 2011, during the PNG LNG boom, there was a shortage of accommodation, triggering construction which then led to oversupply. But if all the projects that are on paper come to fruition, it's going to be another 10 years of growth.

Q: The Crowne Plaza Residences are in a great location. What kind of people are you appealing to with that property?

If all the anticipated (gas) projects come onboard, we are not going to have enough rooms or apartments in Port Moresby.

A: It's the serviced apartment market: about 80 per cent of our guests there are long-term. We have two- and three-bedroom apartments (some facing the ocean). We have a fully equipped gym, with state-of-the-art conferencing facilities. And we have the Port Terrace Restaurant, which undoubtedly has the best sunset view in Port Moresby.

Q: What plans are there to revamp the Holiday Inn precinct?

A: The business centre on the ground floor of the Holiday Inn & Suites will be replaced with a 'Grab and Go' cafe. The existing Kopi Haus Restaurant will be refurbished. We're adding a wood-fired pizza oven from Italy and an Argentinian grill. We are now in talks to open a beer garden too. This should all be done by early 2023.

Q: IHG has a very strong loyalty program, IHG One Rewards, which must be a big selling point.

A: There is no doubt that part of our success was due to our loyalty program, IHG One Rewards. If you look at most people coming into Port Moresby for work, they have to stay somewhere, and you might as well earn points while you're staying. Our guests use their points in over 6000 hotels globally. ■

GDP, or gross domestic product, is one of the most important measures in economics. It is the figure used to assess the size of a nation's economy and whether it is growing. If GDP is increasing it means the economy is faring well; if it has declined for more than six months, it means the country is in a recession.

WHAT IS GDP EXACTLY?

GDP is a measure of transactions, or how much money has changed hands. It is defined as the total monetary or market value of all the finished goods and services produced within a country in a specific time period. Usually, that period is a year. Economists compare how much money has been transacted in the current year compared with the same time a year earlier.

HOW BIG IS PAPUA NEW GUINEA'S GDP?

In 2021, PNG's GDP was PGK96.32 billion, according to the World Bank. That represents 0.02 per cent of the world economy.

WHAT IS GDP PER CAPITA?

This measure is calculated by dividing GDP by the number of people in the population. It provides a crude measure of how much income people on average earn and indicates what stage of economic development the country is at. In 2021, PNG's GDP per capita was PGK10,266, which was a 5.78 per cent increase from 2020. It is generally agreed that a country needs at least a GDP per capita equivalent to PGK35,000 before it can be considered to be 'developed'.

WHAT IS GDP PURCHASING POWER?

GDP measures how much money changes hands, but it does not measure what that money actually buys. This can vary substantially from country to country. Economists attempt to adjust for this by using a measure called GDP purchasing power parity. According to World Economics Research, PNG's GDP in purchasing power parity terms in 2021 was PGK130 billion. That is significantly higher than the estimate for the country's base GDP, implying that Papua New Guineans can purchase more with their money than people in many developed economies.

HOW USEFUL IS GDP AS A MEASURE OF PNG'S ECONOMIC PERFORMANCE?

GDP is a good measure of the formal economy, where all monetary transactions are recorded. But it is not useful for assessing the informal economy, where transactions are either not recorded or there are exchanges that do not involve money, such as barter. It is estimated that about 80 per cent of PNG's population is involved in the informal economy, which implies that there are severe shortcomings when using GDP to assess economic activity in the country (in developed countries, by contrast, the entire population will be in the formal economy). To get a realistic picture of PNG's economy, it is necessary to look beyond the basic economic statistics. ■

the capital city has a population

CLIMATE

With the exception of the Highlands, Papua New Guinea has a warm tropical climate. The wet season in Port Moresby is from December to April.

COMMUNICATIONS

Internet: Web access in Port Moresby has improved immensely in recent years. Complimentary Wi-Fi is available at hotels and at Jacksons International Airport.

Phone: International phone roaming is possible in PNG, but it can be costly. A cheaper option is to buy a local SIM card and pre-paid credit (including data packs for smartphones). Mobile data is available in cities and towns but may not be available in rural areas.

ELECTRICITY

The current in PNG is 240V AC 50Hz, using Australian-style plugs.

GETTING AROUND

Airport transfers: For arrival/ departure in Port Moresby, hotels provide a complimentary transfer.

Car hire: Deal with one of the international names and ask them to provide a driver (PGK450+ per day). With the poor state of roads, especially in Lae, 4WDs/SUVs are recommended.

Taxis: Recommended firms are City Loop (70124400) and Comfort (325 3046). Expedient Limited (7232 9990) provides shuttle services. ODESH is Port Moresby's first taxi and chauffeur on-demand booking service. See odes.net.

Domestic flights: Travelling within PNG often means taking an internal flight (for instance, you cannot drive between Port Moresby and Lae). Air Niugini offers passengers the chance to book (and for some flights, also to check in) online, but make sure you print out a copy of your receipt to show at check-in. Aircraft and helicopter charters are available for travel to remote locations.

HEALTH

Serious medical conditions can be treated in Port Moresby at Pacific International Hospital, Paradise Private Hospital and Port Moresby General Hospital, which have emergency services. Some conditions may require treatment outside the country. Travellers should ensure they have adequate health cover. The cost of medical evacuation can be high. Your health inflight

At Air Niugini we care about your comfort and safety. We have included the following information about your health in-flight that we hope you will find helpful and useful.

When you are flying you can be seated and be inactive for long periods of time. The environment can be low in humidity and pressurised up to an altitude of 2240 metres above sea level. Unlike other forms of transportation, air travel allows for rapid movement across many time zones, causing a disruption to the body's "biological clock". Although these unique factors do not pose a health or safety threat to most passengers, there are guidelines you can follow that will improve your comfort level, during and after a flight. We hope the following recommendations will help you have a more pleasant flight today and in the future.

Blood Circulation / Muscle Relaxation

When you're sitting upright in a stationary position for a long period of time, several things can happen.

The central blood vessels in your legs can be compressed, making it more difficult for the blood to get back to your heart.

The long inactivity of your body muscles in this position can result in muscle tension, back aches or a feeling of excessive fatigue during, or even after, your flight.

A stationary position inhibits the normal body mechanism for returning fluid to your heart, and gravity can cause the fluid to collect in your feet. This results in swollen feet after a long flight.

Studies have concluded that prolonged immobility may be a risk factor in the formation of clots in the legs (DVT - deep vein thrombosis). Particular medication and medical conditions may increase the risk of formation of clots if associated with prolonged immobility.

Medical research indicates that factors which may give you an increased risk of blood clots in the legs include:

- Former or current malignant disease
- Blood disorders leading to increased clotting tendency
- Personal or family history of DVT

- Immobilisation for a day or more

Recommendations

- If you fall into any of these categories or you have any concern about your health and flying, Air Niugini recommends you seek medical advice before travelling.
- Follow our in-flight exercises programme.

Jetlag

The main cause of jetlag is travelling to different time zones without giving the body a chance to adjust to new night-day cycles. In general, the more time zones you cross during your flight, the more your biological clock is disturbed.

The common symptoms are sleeplessness, tiredness, loss of appetite or appetite at odd hours.

Recommendations

- Get a good night's rest before your flight.
- Arrive at your destination a day or two early, to give your body a chance to become more acclimatised to the new time zone.
- Leave your watch on home time if you're staying at a destination less than 48 hours. Also try to eat and sleep according to your home time.

- Change your watch to the local time if your stay is longer than 48 hours, and try to eat and sleep in accordance with the local time.
- On longer stays, try to prepare in advance, adjust your meal and rest times to be closer to those of your destination.
- Try some light exercise - go for a brisk walk, or do some reading if you can't sleep after arrival at your destination. It generally takes the body's biological clock approximately one day to adjust per time zone crossed.
- Fly direct to minimise flight time. This allows you to relax more upon arrival.

Cabin Humidity / Dehydration

Humidity levels of less than 25 percent are common in the cabin. This is due to the extremely low humidity levels of outside air supplied to the cabin. The low humidity can cause drying of the nose, throat, eyes and it can irritate contact lens wearers.

Recommendations

- Drink water or juices frequently during the flight
- Drink coffee, tea and alcohol in moderation. These drinks acts as diuretics, increasing the body's dehydration.
- Remove contact lenses and wear glasses if your eyes are irritated.
- Use a skin moisturiser to refresh the skin.

Eating and Drinking

Proper eating and drinking will enhance your comfort both during and after your flight.

Recommendations

- Avoid overeating just prior to and during the flight. It is difficult to digest too much food when the body is inactive.
- Drink coffee, tea and alcohol in moderation. These drinks acts as diuretics, increasing the body's dehydration.

Cabin Pressurisation

It is necessary to pressurise the outside air drawn into the cabin to a sufficient density for your comfort and health.

Cabins are pressurised to a maximum cabin altitude of 2440 metres. It is the same air pressure as if you were at an elevation of 2440 metres above sea level. The cabin pressure and normal rates of change in cabin pressure during climb and descent do not pose a problem for most passengers. However, if you suffer from upper respiratory or sinus infections, obstructive pulmonary diseases, anaemias or certain cardiovascular conditions, you could experience discomfort. Children and infants might experience some discomfort because of pressure change during climb and descent.

If you are suffering from nasal congestion or allergies, use nasal sprays, decongestants and antihistamines 30 minutes prior to descent to help open up your ear and sinus passages. If you have a cold or flu or hay fever your sinuses could be impaired. Swollen membranes in your nose could block your eustachian tubes-the tiny channels between your middle ear chamber. This can cause discomfort during changes in cabin pressure, particularly during descent.

Recommendations

- If you have a pre-existing medical condition that warrants supplemental oxygen, you can order from us. Please give at least seven days notice before travelling.
- To "clear" your ears try swallowing and/or yawning. These actions help open your eustachian tubes, equalizing pressure between your ear chamber and your throat.
- When flying with an infant, feed or give your baby a dummy during descent. Sucking and swallowing will help infants equalize the pressure in their ears.

Motion Sickness

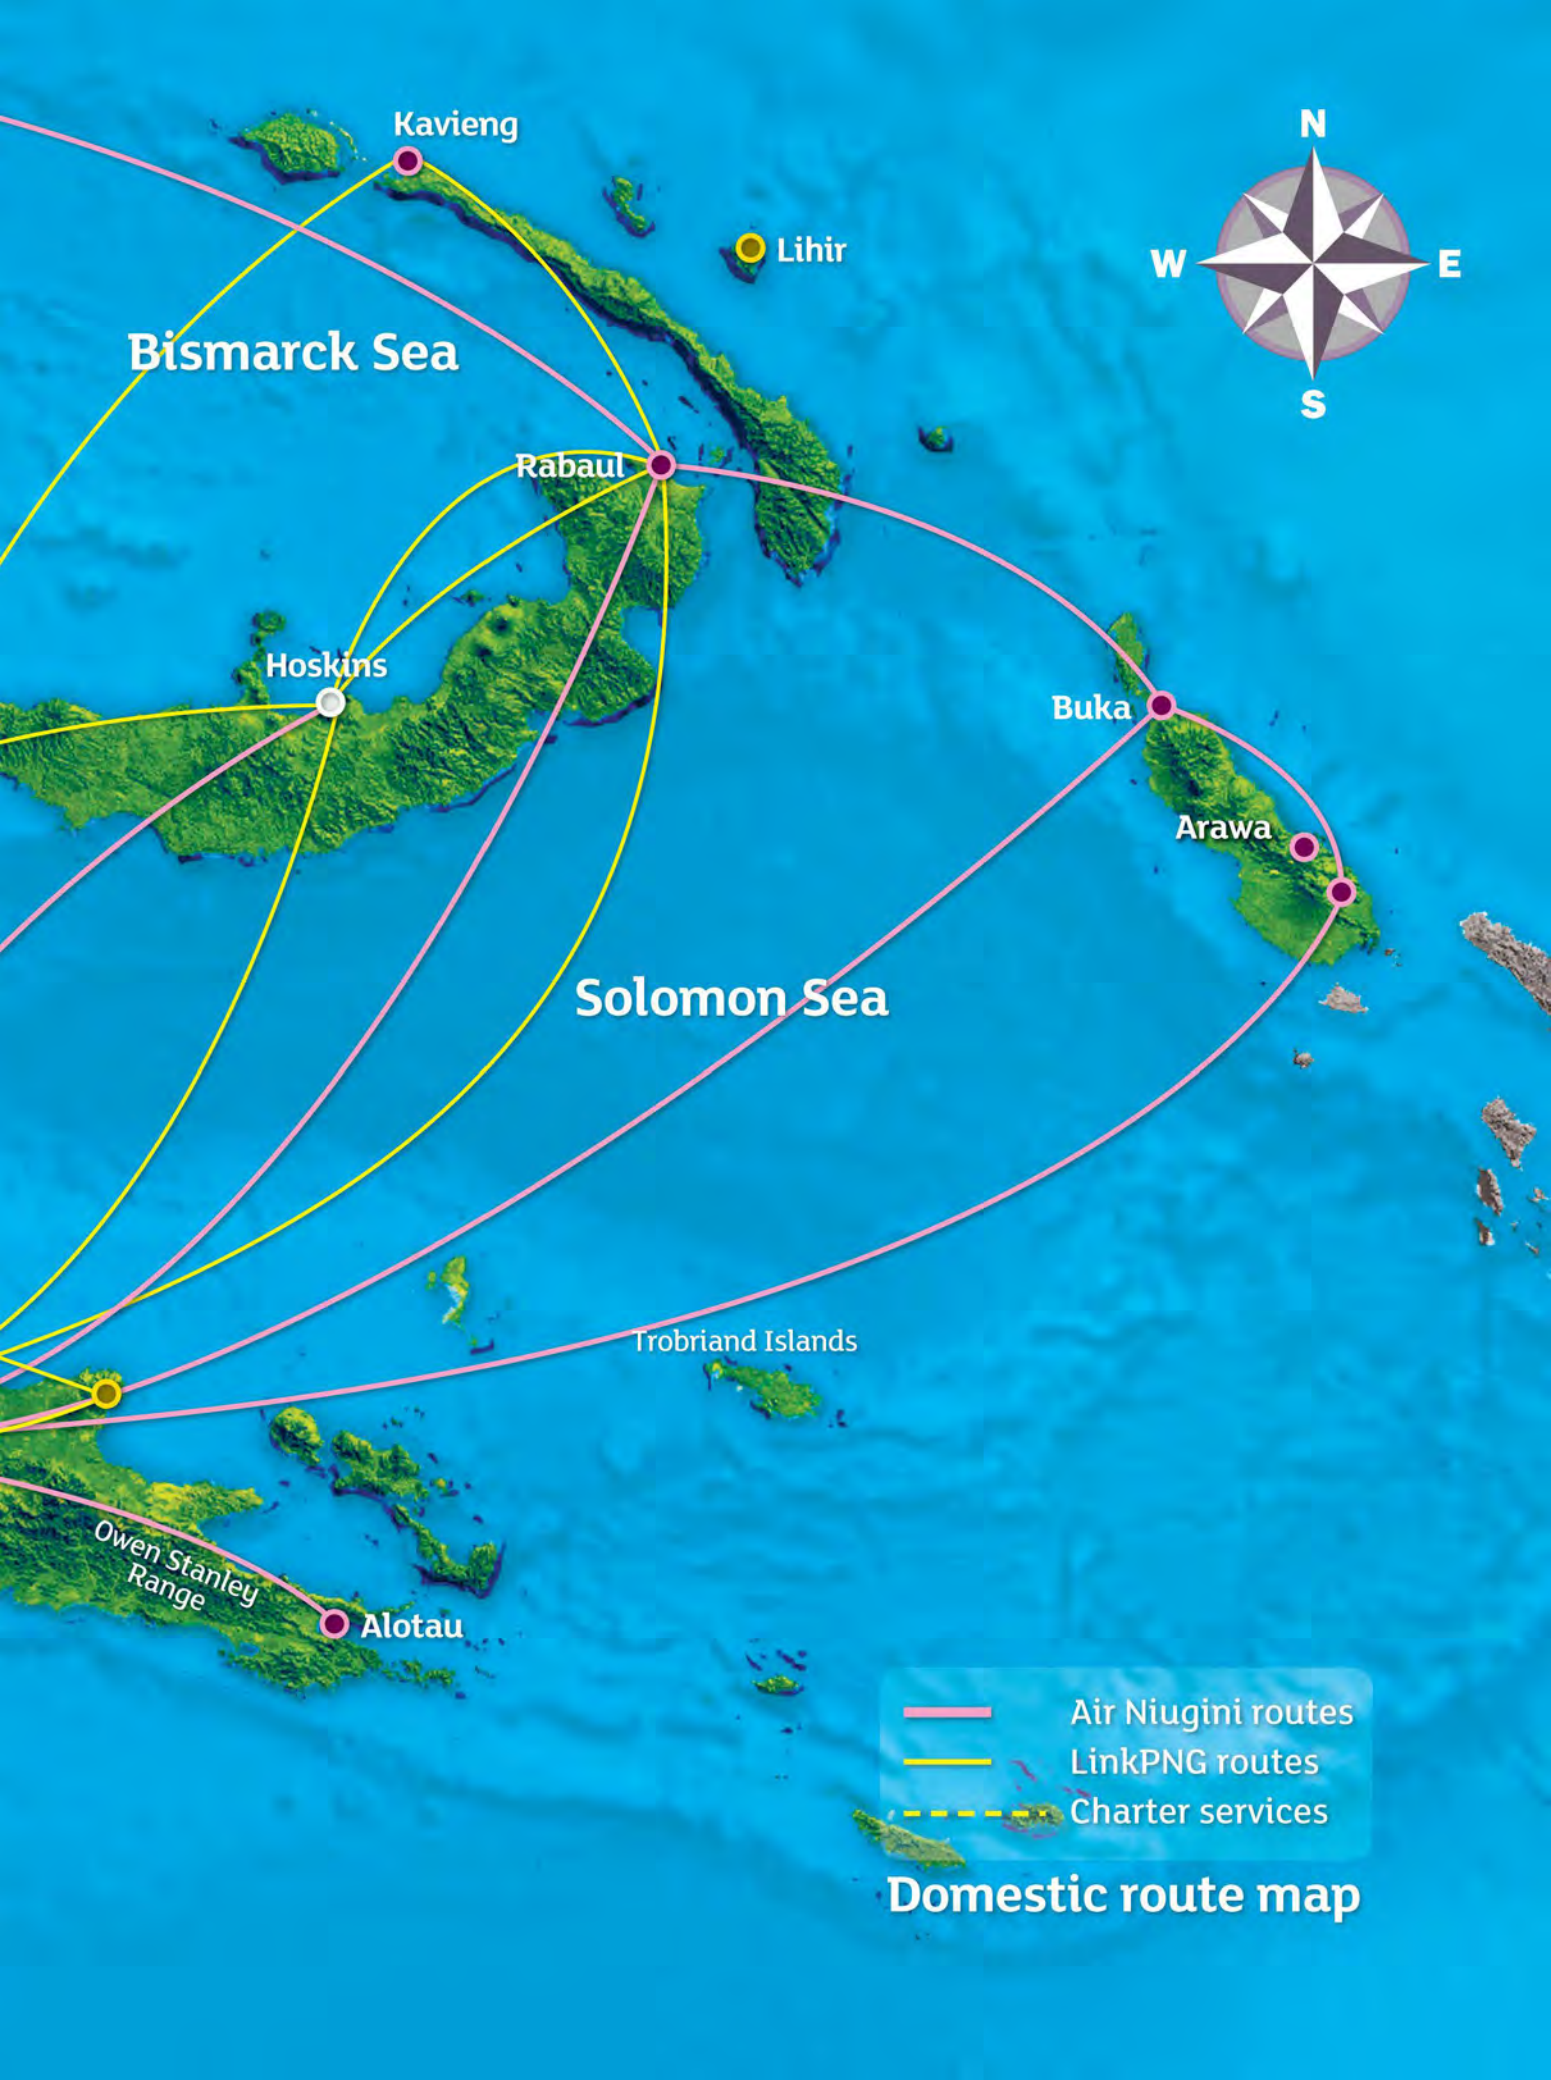

This ailment is caused by a conflict between the body's sense of vision and its sense of equilibrium. Air turbulence increases its likelihood because it can cause movement of the fluid in the vestibular apparatus of the inner ear. If you have good visual cues (keeping your eyes fixed on non-moving object), motion sickness is less likely to occur.

Recommendations

- When weather is clear and you can see the ground, sea or horizon, you are less susceptible to motion sickness.
- You can buy over the counter medications but we recommend that you consult your doctor about the appropriate medications.

Your wellbeing

These exercises are designed to encourage a safe way to enjoy movement and stretch certain muscle groups that can become stiff as a result of long periods of sitting. They may be effective in increasing the body's circulation and massaging the muscles. We recommend you do these exercises for three or four minutes every hour and occasionally get out of your seat and walk down the aisles if conditions allow. Each exercise should be done with minimal disturbance to other passengers. None of the following should be performed if they cause pain or cannot be done with ease.

ANKLE CIRCLES

Lift feet off the floor. Draw a circle with toes, simultaneously moving one foot clockwise and the other foot counter clockwise. Reverse circles. Do each direction for 15 seconds. Repeat if desired.

KNEE LIFTS

Lift leg with knee bent while contracting your thigh muscle. Alternate legs. Repeat 20-30 times for each leg.

SHOULDER ROLL

Hunch shoulders forward, then upward, then backward, then downward using a gentle circular motion.

ARM CURL

Start with arms held high at 90° angle - elbows down, hands out in front. Raise hands up to chest and back down alternating arms. Do these exercises in 30 second intervals.

KNEE TO CHEST

Bend forward slightly. Clasp hands around left knee and hug it to your chest. Hold stretch for 15 seconds. Keeping hands around knee, slowly let it down. Alternate legs. Repeat 10 times.

FORWARD FLEX

With both feet on the floor and stomach held in slowly, bend forward to walk your hands down the front of your legs towards your ankles. Hold stretch for 15 seconds and slowly sit back up.

OVERHEAD STRETCH

Raise both arms straight up and over your head. With one hand grasp the wrist of the opposite hand and gently pull to one side. Hold stretch for 15 seconds. Repeat other side.

SHOULDER STRETCH

NECK ROLL

With shoulders relaxed, drop ear to shoulder and gently roll neck forward and to the other side, holding each position about 5 seconds. Repeat 5 times.

FOOT PUMPS

Foot motion is in three stages.
1. Start with both heels on the floor and point feet upwards as high as you can.

2. Put both feet flat on the floor.

3. Lift heels high, keeping balls of feet on floor. Continue these three stages with continuous motion in 30 second intervals.
